Flamingo Empowerment (LightWorker™ Series)

- Beauty, balance, and grace

Dreams

As dream symbols, these colorful birds may announce new experiences and situations you are going to face soon in your waking life. Due to their beautiful appearance, flamingoes may also be associated with the exaggerated attention you give to the physical aspect or 'looks' that you are at this time. The dream advises you not to be so concerned about the way you look, but to focus more on the inner, invisible you.

Totem

The flamingo is a flamboyant and vibrant totem that offers joy and love.

These beautiful, tall, slender and graceful birds rarely appear in people's dreams, but, when they do, they stand for kindness and positive traits of character. These birds also denote sociability and sense of community, therefore they represent individuals who can easily communicate with the others and integrate into society.

Flamingo as a totem teaches the importance of balance. Pink is the color associated with the heart chakra, and the pink coloring in flamingos vibrates with heart center and emotional energies. The flamingo is a visionary who draws its power from water. When flamingo makes its appearance you may need to get in touch with your emotional being. Although those with this totem have psychic abilities they need to strengthen the reasoning powers of the mind using their logic and intuition before making decisions and remember to weigh all sides of a situation before taking action. Those with this totem are dedicated to their choices, loyal to their causes and have a tendency to reach further than most to accomplish their goals.

Some questions you might want to ask yourself.....

Are you out of balance in some way?

Are you leaning too far in one direction?

Flamingo teaches us not to be afraid to show our emotions.

People with Flamingo medicine

Those with this medicine feel comfortable and safe in groups. They have difficulty being alone or on their own. They are followers rather than leaders and need to pay attention to what they are following and make sure that it honors their personal truth.

Those who hold this medicine have the ability to appear to be what they are not. This ability serves as a disguise when appropriate and allows them to slide in and out of situations gracefully.

They make excellent actors and performers. The ability to change colors gives them the magical properties associated with illusion and shape shifting.

Symbolizes

The Egyptians revered the flamingo as a living embodiment of the sun God Ra. Because the eye of the flamingo is actually larger than its brain they are associated with clear sightedness. Flamingos see exceptionally well but due to the smallness of their brain they are not always able to interpret what they see efficiently. This is one reason why they live in groups. They rely on one another and work with group consciousness rather than individual awareness.

Flamingos have a long life span. They are social birds and are very vocal. They are extremely sensitive to loud noises and chaotic situations and will flee from them instantaneously. They teach us how to follow suit and not engage in situations that are detrimental to us on any level.

Flamingos breed for life and are loyal to their partners. They have the longest migration of any other bird.

Flamingos.....

The word Flamingo comes from the Latin word flame. The Flamingo is a bird with many faces. They live in large flocks and are seldom seen on their own. Living in large groups gives them a sense of security and protection. Flamingos are fascinating birds with a striking appearance. Their pink color is caused by a food they eat which contains carotene. Without this food in their diet their feathers turn white.

As well as standing in the water, flamingos may stamp their webbed feet in the mud to stir up food from the bottom. Flamingos often stand on one leg. The reason for this behavior is not fully known. A leg is tucked beneath the body, because the flamingo like some other animals has the ability to have half of its body go into a state of sleep, and when one side is rested, the flamingo will swap leg and then let the other half sleep, but this has not been proven.

It is often suggested that this is done in part to keep the legs from getting wet, in addition to conserving energy. Standing on one leg may allow the birds to conserve more body heat, given they spend a significant amount of time wading in cold water .

Ancient Times

In Ancient Rome, flamingo tongues were considered a delicacy. Believed to be a cure for tuberculosis, Andean miners have killed flamingos for their fat.

The Moche people of ancient Peru worshipped nature. They placed emphasis on animals and often depicted flamingos in their art.
